The French Psychological Society (SFP – Société Française de Psychologie), founded in 1901, has contributed to the construction of psychological knowledge and practice in France for more than a century. Its main goals are :

- To contribute to the build up of a body of psychological knowledge
- To stimulate and disseminate research and innovation in all branches of psychology
- To provoke exchange between professionals, promoting exchanges between practitioners and researchers
- To express the unity of psychology across the diversity of its field of research and application.
- To defend a psychological exercise based upon scientific knowledge and warranted by a Professional Code of Ethics.

The French Psychological Society is a founding member of the IUPsyS and supports the French representation in the International Congress of Psychology (International Congress of the IUPsyS, International Congress of Applied Psychology). The FPS is a full member of the International Test Commission, of which the FPS has been a founder member.

It is equally represented across the National French Committee of Scientific Psychology (Comité National Français de Psychologie Scientifique - CNFPs), and the point of contact for the Academy of Sciences for Psychology.

The SFP brings together a large number of members concerned about making explicit, and exchanging, the knowledge that founded our discipline. All the fields of application of psychology and all the domains of research are represented by the SFP. With 8 partner organisations, it represents 5,000 researchers, teachers and psychologists.

The SFP is made up of 3 departments: the Department of Research in Psychology (DRP); the Department of Applications and Interventions in Psychology (DAIP); Department of Associated Organisations (DOA).

Partner Organisations - members of the DOA

-Association des Conseillers d'Orientation-Psychologues (Career Advice Psychologists Association) – France – ACOP-F;
-Association Française de Psychologie Linguistique (French Association of Linguistic Psychology) - AFPL;
-Association Française de Psychologie de la Santé (French Association of Health Psychology) -AFPSA ;

-Association Française des Psychologues Scolaires (French Association of School Counsellors) – AFPS ;
- Collectif des Copsy of SNES;
- Collectif des Copsy of SNUIPP ;
-Institut Pierre Janet -IPJ ;
-Société Française de Psychologie du Sport (French Society of Sport Psychology) - SFPS

The French Psychological Society publishes two important peer reviewed psychology Journals:

Psychologie française

The SFP published its first journal, Psychologie Française, in 1956 to report accounts of original research, articles of theoretical thought or those concerning psychological practice, to publish assessments of major research themes or psychology practice, accounts of scientific events and activities of interest to psychologists, and news concerning the world of psychology.

Pratiques psychologiques

Since 1995, Pratiques Psychologiques has published original applied research, individual studies and commentaries relating to the practice of psychology. The articles submitted to the publication deal with a given theme and tackle from a wide perspective (health, education, justice and work, etc.) theoretical, empirical or pedagogical aspects of this theme. This publication is largely concerned with the promotion of applied research in psychology, in all fields of this discipline.

Répertoire des revues francophones de psychologie

The Répertoire des Revues Francophones de Psychologie provides:

- Better knowledge of different French language editorial outlets of in psychology.
- A selection of publication outlets facilitated and adapted to work themes;
- A list of addresses of the main French-language psychology journals;
- A presentation of the orientations of these journals;
- Advice for authors.

The congress of the French Psychological Society

SFP organises a congress every two years.

Current issues workshops of the French Psychological Society

The aim of these current issues workshops is to gather together principally, but not exclusively, French researchers around a theme chosen by the department office. The workshop must report on the state of play of research in France in a domain of psychology and define the development perspectives of future research.

Conferences and days organised by the Department of Applications and Interventions in Psychology (DAIP) and the Department of Associated Organisations (DOA), especially around practical exchange

An Internet Site

This offers to browsers, psychologists or students of psychology in particular, information and resources regularly updated. The SFP site receives 500,000 visitors per year.
